

TENABO.

A Camp in Which Many Prominent Salt Lakers Are Interested.

One of the younger and more promising of the Nevada mining camps is that of Tenabo, situated in the old Bullion mining district, in Lander county, its point of traffic communication with the railroad being Beowawe on the Southern Pacific, less than twenty-five miles to the north.

This has never been one of the boom camps so characteristic of the state, but has, during the past year or more, made surprising strides in coming to the front, all of the properties having been developed and mined in a conservative way so that the growth of the camp has been steady, strong, and directed entirely toward permanent results. Several of the properties have been steadily shipping high-grade ore during the past year or more, while others have been uncovering new veins, and ore bodies, and sacking substantial quantities of good ore for future shipment. The transportation facilities have been steadily improved and a service of traction engines and automobiles installed during the past year and a number of side enterprises attendant on the general mining enterprise have been launched by strong, conservative business men.

The ores of the camp occur in a big series of strong and continuous veins cutting through the porphyry, and the fact that their extraordinary values were so long overlooked in a district as old as the Bullion district is due to the fact that general prospecting had always been directed toward the sedimentary beds of the vicinity wherein several good producers such as the old Cortez mine have been in existence for years. The oxidized ores near the surface carry extraordinary values in gold, silver and copper, but of course do not occur in such large and continuous bodies as do the sulphide ores to which they have given place unflinchingly throughout the camp at depth ranging from 75 to 200 feet.

Among the more prominent properties of the camp are the Gold Quartz, Reliance, Grand Victor of Nevada, Nevada-Pocahontas and Nevada-Phoenix, all of which are among the producers. The Gold Quartz and the Reliance being among the older mines have already a shipping record. Special mention is due the Grand Victor of Nevada, which is one of the very latest and without doubt the most promising of the properties of this camp. This property is so admirably located as to be traversed by all the best known north-and-south veins of the camp, which have furnished most of the past production of the camp, and to which are added the series of east-and-west veins that have added later production, both series intersecting within the territory of this company. This company was taking out good shipping ore within less than two months after its incorporation, but recognizing that the very best and biggest deposits in the whole camp should be at the point of intersection of the two main veins of the vicinity and at which point a magnificent outcrop yielded extraordinary values, the main working shaft of the property was located at that point and has been driven to a depth of over 300 feet. A cross-cut from this shaft is now going through stringers of sulphides with every promise of encountering the main bodies at any time.

The ores here are especially desirable for their exceptional smelting qualities, so that rock running as low as $25 to the ton can be shipped and treated at a profit with metal prices at normal. The capital that is developing the camp comes largely from Salt Lake interests represented by men whose past success and long identification with Utah mining enterprises are among the best known in the state.

Tenabo is assuredly one of the camps to be heard from during the coming year.

GREETING--

THE New Year's edition of the Herald is a fitting medium in which to voice our appreciation of the business a generous public vouchsafed the store during the past twelve months. The largest business year in its history has drawn nearly to a close.

During the last quarter the country passed through financial depression, and unseasonable weather prevailed in Utah.

The influence of these potent conditions only temporarily retarded the store's rapid increase over last year's extraordinary business.

Beginning with the holidays, trade showed marked exhilaration and finally forged splendidly ahead.

Each of the last three selling days exceeded in cash and charges the magnificent business the store enjoyed the day before Christmas last year!

Three marvelous days!

So, for this banner year of unmatched trade, we gratefully express our thanks to the purchasing public.

The dawn of a new year is casting first shafts of light. Clouds are still discernible but are passing by. Their silvery lining reveals a promise of restored confidence; renewed prosperity.

Because of faith in the outlook, Keith-O'Brien Company is going ahead with its contemplated improvements. The expense will be heavy. The demands of our present fast growing business must be met. The future is to be considered. Our planning is for both and along big lines.

We are striving to better our facilities. Added floor space will enable stocks to be more attractively arranged. The appearance of the store will be enhanced.

The improvements will be along lines of elegant simplicity, in harmony with present fixtures.

Already work has begun. The entire building will be ready for occupancy before summer.

With the completion of these extensive improvements, the store will once more be prepared to adjust itself to meet the demands of a swiftly growing business.

There will be other improvements. They will include the betterment of the store service and extend to the personnel of the working force. Steadily the standard will be raised.

The store depends largely upon the individual.

It is within the province of each salesperson to make the customer a friend of the store, or drive the customer away.

We have always demanded efficiency in employees, those who have the personality, the business acumen to bring and to hold customers; employees who possess the knack of being courteous at all times, and who understand that politeness is the first commandment.

Our policy includes "no misrepresentation." And that is far reaching. It means that the house insists upon reliability, even to the loss of sales.

We will continue our custom of satisfying every customer; of accepting goods back; of refunding purchase money.

We sell merchandise at the lowest prices consistent with good business. Our large buying facilities are such that no store can undersell us.

During the flurry our bank met every demand with the cash. Both the savings and checking departments paid out money on checks. No certificates were issued.

Keith-O'Brien Company leads today; will lead tomorrow.

The same reasons, the same broad policy, the same character—all have made possible the store's remarkable popularity and growth, and will carry it onward to greater success.

But the pinnacle will be reached.

The store purposes being to the West what Marshall Field's is to the middle states, what Wanamaker's is to the East.
